NOON REPORTS. The End of the Benders.

DES MOINES, IOWA, August 14 .- A letter to the State Register, from a responsible citizen, S. A. James, of Sigoursponsible disconnection on the authority of ney, gives an eye witness, who is also a responsible an eye with the notorious Bender family, man, that the hour in number, were captured soon after the discovery of the murder of Col. Yorke. The eye witness says that the four were stood up in a row, facing nine riflemen, and were told their fate; that Kate was plucky to the last, and called upon their captors to "shoot and be damned." And that the four bodies were buried at the corner of the four counties of Labette, Wilson, Neosho and Montgomery.

Stock Gambling.

CHICAGO, August 14.—The Times publishes a lengthy resume of the celebrated Keene wheat deal, which has now been closed out with a loss to its organizers and participants of several millions of dollars. It says that Chicago owners of one quarter of the deal find themselves each from $250,-000 to $300,000 out. What Keene & Hoyt's loss is cannot be estimated, and H. Smith's loss is estimated from a quarter to a half million of dollars.

The Black Veil.

BALTIMORE, August 14.—At the Convent of Notre Dame, at Govanstown, a few miles from this city, this morning, forty-five young ladies took the black veil, attended by interesting ceremonies of the Catholic Church, and witnessed by an immense congregation. The cars leading to the convent, from an early hour until the ceremonies took place, were crowded with their relatives and friends. Father Neithart, of New Orleans, delivered an address, after which the solemn mass of the Holy Ghost was celebrated. The usual ceremonies followed, after which the novices were invested with the black veil.

Off for Chicago.

Norfolk, August 14.—Grice Commandery, of this city, and Portsmouth Commandery, of Portsmouth, Knights Templar, left this afternoon via Baltimore for Chicago, to be present at the Grand

CUMBERLAND DEMOCRACY IN LINE

GOV. JARVIS AT FAYETTEVILLE.

His Magnificent Reception!

Twenty-Five Hundred People Present! [Special Telegram to THE RALEIGH NEWS.]

FAYETTEVILLE, August 14, 1880. This has been a proud day for Governor Jarvis and the Democracy. His reception in this good old town has been a splendid ovation, and his speech a perfect triumph.

The Governor was met at the "Mile Branch" by two hundred mounted men, and the escort made up of the very best Democratic Imaterial of this Cape Fear section, would have done honor to any man or any occasion. The streets were all animation and life, and the multitude greeted the procession at all points with enthusiastic cheers.

JUDGE BUXTON made his usual speech in his usual dull way, except that he developed a lively interest in the completion of the Cape Fea and Yadkin Valley Railroad. This road he wanted completed, and he insisted that it should receive State aid, and if elected Governor he would do all he could to secure it. The terminus of the road is at this city.

GOVERNOR JARVIS. in reply, showed the worthlessness of Judge Buxton's friendship to the Road. Convict labor had done the work from Egypt west and without that convict labor as everybody knows, the work would not have been done. If Judge Buxton's influence had prevailed, not a spadeful of dirt would have been moved, for he had opposed and voted against the employment of convicts on State works of internal improvement. But convict labor was not all that was necessary to build the Road. Money had been needed to relieve the Road of its embarrassments and enable it to go into the market with its bonds The State had furnished the money, but it could not have done so if the wishes of Judge Buxton had prevailed. Judge Buxton had opposed, and he and his party now oppose, the sale of the Western North Carolina Railroad, and that sale it was and that sale only, which relieved the Treasury and made it possible to give the necessary aid to the Cape Fear and Yadkin Valley Road. In effect, Judge Buxton had done all that man could do to defeat the completion of this great State Railroad. For himself he had no promises to make. His past must be relied upon as guarantee for his future. He would fearlessly and faithfully interests of the people and the State.

The Governor's speech excited tremen dous enthusiasm, and the Cape Fear country will do its full duty on election

ALEXANDER COUNTY.

JAMES BENJAMIN POOL, the Demo cratic nominee for the House of Representatives from Alexander county, is thirty nine years old and received an academic education. In the war between the States he entered the Confederate service in Oc tober, 1861, as a private in Co. "G" 37th regiment N. C. Troops, was elected orderly sergeant, and after serving for some time in that capacity was promoted to the first lieutenantcy, and remained with the company until on the bloody field of Gettysburg he was taken prisoner, carried to Johnson's Island and there confined until the 14th March, 1865, when he was paroled and returned home. In 1868 he was placed on the Democratic county ticket for coroner without his knowledge, and was elected. In 1870 he was elected Register of Deeds, and has held that position continuously since. In 1871, he was elected as a delegate to the State Convention, which did not meet. He is married, has three childetails. THE PARDONING POWER.

Yesterday's Rockingham South has the ollowing paragraph:

"Said a gentleman the other day in ou presence, 'I like Judge Buxton as a man; I think he is a real Christian, but I cannot vote for him to be Governor. The truth is, I regard him as a little too good a man to be either Judge or Governorthat is, he is too kind-hearted and mercifully inclined. As Judge he was not harsh enough with criminals—showed them too much mercy, and should he be elected Governor I fear he would make a too liberal use of the pardoning power. If we would have our laws respected we should vigorously enforce them; if we would prevent crime there is no better way to do it than by dealing severely with criminals. Gov. Jarvis is right in his determination not to interfere to save evil-doers from the just punishment pronounced against them by the Courts: hence he says to the Courts, 'if you don't want men hanged, don't convict them." if we are not mistaken, there are thousands of persons in the State whose opinions on this subject are in full accord with that of the gentleman that we have just quoted. It may be that Gov. Jarvis, by his seeming severity, will lose votes among the vicious and evil disposed, but he deserves all the more to be sustained by the good people, who are real friends to law and order. And it may be that would-be criminals, through fear that they might need Executive clemency will cast their suffrages for Judge Buxton. But we are not at all apprehensive of the result. We feel sure of the triumph of Gov. Jarvis by a decided majority.

We do not care to discuss Judge Bux TON'S personal or moral qualities, and pass by the opportunity to show once more that his judicial mercy, whatever its intent, has found opportunity for exercise only in favor of those whose votes and the votes of their race were like to be necessary to him in contests for judicial re-election, for local office within a Judge's reach, or for nomination to State political office. The spirit of the paragraph, no doubt without any such intent, is not altogether just to Governor JARVIS, and if accepted as accurate such a statement might possibly injure him in the estimation of many of our best citizens who think him, what he is, an upright, conscientious man, who spares no labor nor pains to acquaint himself thoroughly with all matters necessary to the discharge of the lightest duty of his high office. Of course the mere utterance of a flippant generality is not his reply to an application for the exercise of an awful power devolved upon him alone by the

The pardoning power is a necessity. administration of justice that is free from infirmity? Were it possible in every instance to maintain a just proportion be tween the crime and the penalty, and were the rules of testimony and the mode of trial so perfect as to preclude every possibility of mistake or injustice, there would be some color for the admission of the plausible theory that the power of pardon would not exist under a perfect administration of law. But even in that ease policy would sometimes require a remission of a punishment strictly due for a crime certainly ascertained. The very notion of mercy implies the accuracy of the claims of justice. An inexorable government will not only carry justice in some instances to the height of injury but with respect to itself it would be dangerously just." Again: "This power of pardon will appear the more essential when we consider that under the most correct administration of the law, men will some times fall a prey to the vindictiveness of accusers, the inaccuracy of testimony and the fallibility of jurors."

With respect to the exercise of this high prerogative, it must be admitted that there is no duty which the Executive has to perform which involves such responsibility or is attended with so much pain. Upon the presentation of a petition for pardon the Executive is called upon to exert the highest power with which man can be invested, the power of life and death. He has to exert it under the influence of conflicting feelings: on the one side is his duty to society; on the other those sentiments of pity which sway the heart so powerfully in behalf of a fellowbeing who, whatever his past life may have been, is now prostrate and helpless. If he be a man callous to human suffering, he may dismiss the petitioner with smooth words of feigned compassion; if his sensibilities are strong he may yield to the tide of feeling and grant the pardon at once. reckoning this latter perhaps as the safer error of the two. But if he have a proper sense of his high functions, if he appreciates the consequences involved, then in proportion to his conscientiousness will be the strain to which he is subjected. It is a power which is exercised with the utmost care and deliberation, and under a heavy, often crushing sense of responsi-

It is just so that Governor JARVIS regards his duty, and so it is performed. A gentleman of the bar in a distant county some months since waited upon Governor JARVIS with a petition for pardon of a sentenced criminal. It was a case in which, after the trial and conviction, a very strong feeling had been awakened in behalf of the condemned. The Governor at once appointed an hour for the hearing. The case rested upon circumstantial evidence, and the testimony involved many and minute dwelling too long upon any part. On every such occasion the Governor interposed, requesting him to omit nothing that he thought essential. After the statement the Governor went with him point by point through the testimony considering; discussing and weighing each one. The investigation occupied hours, during which our informant said that opportunity was afforded to present the case, and every point of it, in every light. The application was unsuccessful; but our informant was sat isfied that it would have been an inexpressible relief to the Governor if he could have found any ground upon which he could conscientiously have based a pardon.

There is no act of the Executive which ought to be more delicately spoken of by press and people than the exercise of the pardoning power. Little good can come from animadversions except in a case where a pardon has been granted from motives palpably and demonstrably corrupt; and such a case we have never known in this State. In other cases a discreet reserve would be the dictate of wisdom. In general the whole case can be known to the Executive alone: the petition is addressed to him, and he only hears the evidence. The issue is between him and high heaven. He has not, like the judge in a criminal trial, the co-operation of the solicitor and a jury; he has not here, as he has in other cases, the aid of a council to advise him. The constitution has devolved upon him alone this awful power. Let us respect his solemn responsibility.

WILSON'S REPRESENTATIVE.

R. J. TAYLOR, our nominee for the Legislature, says the Sunny Home, "is a man of untiring energy, and we have no doubt will make the people of this county a good Representative. He is identified with the interest of the farmer, the mechanic and the whole people.

THE GREAT INCREASE in Southern population since 1876 is as natural as was the decrease of preceding years. Radical misrule drove off our own people and prevented the incoming of others. Democratic rule has changed all that. As the New York Times says, capital and enterprise go where public faith is to be relied on, where law and order prevail, and where society puts their possessors at ease.

THE MAJORITY must always rule in a party or the party will come to grief. Our Georgia friends have been making experiments in another direction, and the result is that there are two Democratic candidates for Governor. When their Convention met the other day, it adopted the twothirds rule, (a heretofore unheard of proceeding) giving the minority a veto power which was used, and a nomination defeated, barely more than one-third of the delegates successfully resisting the of nearly two thirds of the Convention and of the people. It was a great mistake which has grown out of misconstruction of the uses of the rule in General Conventions. In these the rule is necessary for the protection of the majority of the Democratic party. But for it, candidates might be named in opposition to the will of every certain Democratic electoral vote. Fortunately the trouble is in a State so largely Democratic that no harm can result in the pending Presidential election.

THE DEPOPULATION of New England is good thing for the country. That the New Englander is moving South is another good thing for the country. Mighty well taught in the common schools in all things necessary to make a livelihood, the New Englander grows up in utter ignorance of the actual history of his country, the principles upon which this government was founded, and the habits and needs of his countrymen. He comes to the South, and learning for the first time that there are other places in the country quite as important as Plymouth Rock, and other people quite as good as the progeny of the Pilgrims, he becomes a useful member of society, a citizen valuable not only to a small section but to the whole Union. He learns much from the Southern folk, and by precept and example imparts much useful knowledge. As soon as his eyes are opened so that he can see, of course he becomes a Democrat, and the thing works to advantage in two ways. New England loses a Radical vote and the South gains a Democratic voter. This process is now going on so rapidly that New England may be expected to be solidly Democratic by the next Presidential election.

NEW YORK CORRESPONDENCE.

[Correspondence of THE RALEIGH NEWS.] NEW YORK, Aug. 13, 1880. EDITOR NEWS:-The Hon. William M Shipp, of Charlotte, was here on Wednesday, on his way to visit his son, who is a cadet at West Point, and who in his first year has stood as high as sixth in a class of eighty-five. Mr. Watson, of Raleigh, is also here, and Mr. D. D. Gibson, of Gibson's Store.

The increase of population in North Carolina is exceedingly gratifying. It will not only enable the State to maintain its present representation in Congress, but nay be regarded as a foretaste of the procress which it will make in the future, and will draw to it the attention of settlers from abroad. It is the more remarkable, too, because of the fact, as I suppose it is, that the negroes do not increase as rapidly as they did when they were slaves and they and their children were cared for by masters, whose interest and inclination prompted that care. We shall see how that is when the details come to be digested. It is a curious fact that the adjoining counties of Robeson and Sampson, which are printed next to each other in your table, have exactly the same population, 23,942. Ten years ago they varied but 174. If the Chicago Tribune should note this remarkable coincidence it will be ready to make affidavit that it is an attempt to defraud the North. And upon as good grounds as that Governor of Georgia who charged the banks of his State with fraud because the debtor and creditor sides of their accounts always agreed to a cent, a thing which he contended was incredible on a fair count with such large business as they did. By this morning's papers I see decided indications from Washington of a purpose to discredit the census returns of the Southern States, with a view to a curtailment of the proper power of the South in Congress and Presidential elections. The charge is manslaughter, for which four U.S. inspectors, seven owners, the captain and engineer will doubtless tried, with what result cannot be predicted; for while public clamor and the efforts of the surviving relatives of the dead will press for conviction and punishment, the seven owners of the vessel are men of influence and wealth, who will leave no stone unturned to escape the penitentiary. The indictments are accompanied by a long presentment, which shows very clearly that nstead of the owners and officers of the boat it is the President of the United States, or the Secretary of the Treasury, or Senator Conkling, or whoever else it was that appointed utterly incompetent and negligent inspectors, that ought to be sent o the penitentiary, for the jurors say their oaths that the engineers licensed are so ignorant as not to be able to answer single question in regard to amount of steam in a boiler where such boiler had no steam gauge, several of the licensed engineers who were examined admitting that they had "not got the education to figure it out:" and a to other officers of such boats the jury say that "more consideration is given to the question of the applicant's availability for a special place, than to his general qualifi-And into such incompetent hands tens of thousands of people daily commit their lives, under the delusive belief that the government has provided for their satety by selecting skilled inspectors and engineers, according to law. Hancock and other high army officers in December, 1876, for the purpose of ascertaining from them who of then might be relied on to stand by Grant and Hayes in the conspiracy, to instal the latter as President instead of Tilden, who had been elected. His first letter was dated December 5th, the day after Congress met and not receiving a prompt answer, for Gen. Hancock was traveling, he wrote again on the 17th, and then Hancock wrote the noble letter which has been pub lished, and which would stand as a lasting monument to his fame if he had never said nor done anything else. Boynton, the receiver of the stolen bonds of $1,000 and $500, who tried to sell them here, is having as bad a time as the thief ought to have had, and might have had if he had not died. It appears in evidence that the bonds were stolen along with upwards of $100,000 of others from the owners in South Carolina by a surgeon in Sherman's army, named Brigham, who died a year ago and left these and other stolen bonds to his widow. At her request Boynton has been trying to sell them, first in South Carolina and then here, and was repeatedly informed that they were stolen, and cautioned against offering them for sale. The widow admitted that they were "captured," which is putting it very gently. If all the other "captors" of bonds, money, spoons, jewelry, pictures, pianos, books, and what not, and all the receivers thereof could be put in Boynton's fix there would not be jails enough in the North and West to hold privately, for the reason that he signs himself "Rip Van Winkle," and there are so many of that family that I have no clue to his identity. His object, after compliments to myself of old and to my correspondence of the present, is to complain that in a late letter I mentioned several eminent North Carolina stump-speakers, and among them only one original Democrat; and, says he, that "from the ranks of the Whigs come the Governors, Senators, Congressmen, Judges, and even journalists of old North Carolina." And ne mentions one Democrat by name, and says there are "others all over the State whom I might have classed with Badger Morehead, Graham, Miller, McRae and Vance. I did not pretend to name all who are deserving of high rank in the field of oratory, or I should have included Gaston, John Stanly, Hawks, and Mangum, among the dead, and Davis among the living, but merely a few of those who first presented themselves to my mind; and if he could know under what circumstances of pre-occupation of mind and of incessant interruptions I write, he would not wonder that friends and even self are sometimes forgotten. Some writers have not time to make their epistles short. It is not easy for me to find time to make mine long. As to the one Democrat whose name he mentions, though a political opponent, he was a warm personal friend, who filled with deserved distinction the many public trusts committed to him, in cluding that highest one in which health failed and after which death soon followed But he was never classed among the leading orators of the State, and I would not thus class him. For myself, since the day of Lincoln's proclamation, in April 1861, I never cared a button for any party but that which sustained the Confederac during the war, and has resisted the rule of the oppressors and robbers of the South since its close. The war extinguished the grand old Whig party as a party at the South as Abolitionism had engulphed it at the North. All true Southern men were therefore and necessarily united in one party I never cared what it was called, nor who held its offices and reaped its honors. It may have happened, I know not and care not, that a majority of these may have been, or may be, former Whigs; but I do care that they should not be Radicals and

Butler's Contempt for a Detected Crimi

[Philadelphia (Rad.) Star. Feb. 7, 1873.] Gen. Butler got in a terrific blow or farfield vesterday, which has been the talk of the town to-day. Garfield is a comparatively young man and an exceedingly able man, and until he got into the Credi Mobilier job was considered a man of the most sterling integrity. By means of his ability he is chairman of the second most important committee in the House-appropriations. He has an exceedingly sensitive nature, and probably no man involved in the Credit Mobilier feels more keenly his disgrace. He has been unfor tunate, and especially in his hatred of General Butler. He belongs to that class of supposed highly moral men in politics who think it a highly moral duty to consider General Butler as a bad man and to treat him accordingly. Yesterday, during a debate on the postoffice appropriation bill, when Myers was trying to have the pay of the overworked letter-carriers raised to a respectable figure, General Butler favored the proposition and pitched into the Post Of fice Department. Garfield was managing the bill, and feeling annoyed at Butler's remarks, said it was merely spite work. Butler retorted, and Garfield replied that he didn't care to have any personal quarrel with the gentlemen. Butler as quick as a flash rose and waving his hand sig nificantly at Garfield, said: "God knows don't want any quarrel with the gentleman. De mortuis nil nisi bonum." which in good United States language means that it was not Butler's desire to hit a man when he is down. The speech struck Garfield like a thunderbolt. He sat down in his seat utterly speechless and demoralized. The whole House saw the fierceness of the speech, and for a minute or more there was a death-like silence. It was sad and very painful.

A Queer Graze.

Wal, 'twas curns the way it happened and I ain't got tired tellin' about it yet.

It was awelterin' hot that day, the sort of weither when folks would be glad to take off their flesh and sit down in their bones. There hadn't been a drop of rain for four weeks, and everything looked thirsty. I went about in the afternoon very corrow-ful like, sprinklin' the flowers and thinkin' that the time soon was a-comin' when some one else would be watchin' 'em Things had been gettin' harder ever since brother Reuben was lost on his last voyage, and I hadn't been able to pay the mortgage interest, and old Squire Jones was gone, and everything in the hands of that wild son; and I'd got notice if the money wasn't paid by the 30th of June, everything would be seized. I didn't rightly know how I was goin' to make a livin' either. I was gettin' elderly—nigh sixty—and when folks are as old as that they're like cats, and don't care about new homes. So I sat down very melancholy at the window, and looked out at the little scrap of a garden where I had worked for years, and began to think of the time I was a slip of a girl, and not so bad-lookin', and Pollonius Sawyer used to come and see me and bring me a momentum, as he called it, from every voyage Lor', the house was just cluttered up with queer old things that Rube and he brough that wouldn't bring a sixpence at a vandoo. The Mayor's court failed to furnish an item yesterday. When we entered, William Henry Harrison smiled, and looking wickedly from his left eye said: "Are you getting up things for the newspapers again?" When informed that our business there was to that identical purpose, William Henry addressed himself the following: "I always like to see a newspaper man come in, but when I know that there is nothing on the Mayor's docket, I feel just like something was going to be said about me. Now you can say anything you like, but don't tell about my going to sleep and getting my face blacked and being told that a message summoned me to see the Governor." Certainly not, we told him, and we would not for the world say a word about it, because it was some of Dick Fowler's tricks.

THE MARKET.—The market yesterday was much better than ordinary, and one could get a little something for a Sunday dinner. It may be because it was Saturday; if so there are many who would pray for Saturday all the week.

Suspicious.—Isterday the attention of Coroner Richaron was called to the very sudden death a healthy illegitimate child in East Raleis under circumstances calculated to raise spicion that its death was not from natual causes. A proper and thorough examittion of the case was made, from which tl following facts were gathered; The moth of the child is subject to fits, and durir the early hours of yesterdey morning sh was attacked with one. The infant wasat the time in bed with her, and just asthe mother was recovering from the atick a colored woman entered the room. Se raised the mother up and discovered the infant under her breast dead. The juy will continue the case this morning, an it is thought from the evidence so farelicited, the verdict will be that the chil came to its death from being smothered y its mother.

THE KING OF SERTS.-Messrs. W. H. & R. S. Tucker Ifew days since advertised the "King of Shirts" and many were the calls to examie them. Now an examination means to urchase, for when the merits of the "Kirg" are explained as the clever clerks at Juckers' can explain, no one will leave withut at least one just to try. The first lo are all gone, five dozen will arrive on Monday, with a large invoice following. The shirt is destined to take the place of all others in the market, for comfort, make and cheapness. Remember it is the King of shirts.

A GOOD RIDDANCE.-The old eye-sore those ricketty old frame buildings on Salisbury street, in rear of he jail, yesterday disappeared, at least all lut one, and made place for the large new lvery stable being built in that locality. There are many more just such old frames which should be pulled down, some on Fivetteville street.

A GRAND AFFAIR.-The young men of Mecklenburg have given notice that they will give a grand ball at Buffalo Lithia Springs on Wednesday, August 28. Every necessary arrangement for the complete success of the affair is in good hands, and the event of the season for the guests of this popular summer resort will be due to the young men of Mecklenburg.

SUPREME COURT.—Court opened yesterday morning at 10 o'clock. All the Justices were present.

The consideration of appeals at the end of the docket was resumed and causes were lisposed of as follows:

L. H. Yeargin vs. Susan Siler et als from Wake; argued by Walter Clark for the plaintiff, and Gilliam & Gatling for the defendant. S. Wineberry vs. F. D. Koonce, from Onslow; argued by R. W. Nixon (by brief) and Battle & Mordecai for the plaintiff; no counsel for the defendant. State vs. John Grady, from New Hanover; argued by Attorney General Kenan (by brief) and G. M. Smedes for the State, and D. K. McRae (by brief) for the defendant. Jones vs. Mial et als, from Wake: continued by consent. State vs. J. W. Alphin, from Wayne continued for absence of counsel.

Court adjourned until 10 o'clock to morrow (Monday) morning, when the end of the docket will be resumed.

WAKE SUPERIOR COURT.-Court me at 9:30 o'clock yesterday. His Honor Judge J. F. Graves presiding. The following business was transacted:

M. T. Leach vs. I. H. Fleming: C. F. McKesson made party plaintiff. Demurrer overruled. Appeal.
State ex. rel Board of Commissioners of Wake et. al. vs. The City of Raleigh; demurrer overruled. Defendant has leave to file answer. A. C. Sanders & Co. vs. Jos. A. Haywood (two cases); judgment, non-suit, and against plaintiff for costs. William Menick vs. S. D. Harrison verdict and judgment for plaintiff. Court adjourned until Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

JUSTICE BARBEE'S COURT.—Two colored damsels, by name Ida Manly and Ann Eliza Howard, walked up vesterday to the bar on a charge of larceny. Another female darkey prosecuted, but failing to make out other than a malicious prosecution the court taxed her with the costs and dismissed the defendants. A little more of such rulings would prevent so much frivolous prosecution in the courts. A case of assault and battery was called and postponed. Another slander case has begun, the parties being two peanut venders. The defendant not being as ready for trial as the complainant, Squire Barbee adjourned the case till 8 o'clock Monday morning.

Wake county has just paid a heavy bill of costs on a slander case and the peculiarity of our law will no doubt be again tested on this case. The defendant was placed under $200 bond for his appearance.

A SLY ONE .- A Wake county farmer s endeavoring to be the subject of an item on the first bale of new cotton. He is operating in this way. Having an abundance of shelter roofing he has pulled nearly three wagon loads of cotton bolls and placed them on the shelter roof to dry out and open. Now that would have been good enough had not his neighbor told it to a newspaper man, but we will not mention his name unless he brings in the first bale; then we will have to tell it, may be.

THROUGH FREIGHTS.—Yesterday there were several New York and New England cars passed over the Seaboard and Air-Line Railway, filled with freight from Jersey City for Charlotte. These cars are through direct from New York without breaking package. There is an immense freight business building up on this road and when our people learn to properly appreciate their situation, we will have a good railroad communication with the enire country.

An incident of the Tennessee Democratic Convention was the appearance on the platform of Elias Polk, the colored body servant of President Polk, who, by manimous consent of the Convention, was invited to address the body. He was escorted to the stand by Gen. B. F. The increase in the orange crop of Florida within the past six years has been most remarkable. In 1874 the orange plantations were very few, the larger ones not exceeding four. Now they are numerous on Indian river, Orange lake, on the Upper Ocklawaha and Chrystal rivers, while the St. John's river is lined for two hundred miles with valuable groves. In 1874 the entire crop was represented by 2,500 half barrel cases. It has risen since then by the following gradations: In 1875 the crop was 10,000 half-barrel cases; 1876, 5,000; 1877, 31,000; 1878, 75,000; 18 200,000.

A sensation was created on Monday by the announcement of a rich mining strike in the Mexican village Los Placitos, about thirty miles from Santa Fe. The village is built of adobe, but the foundations of the houses are of rock. Prospector Jesse Martin detected mineral in this rock, and pounded up and hammered some of it, getting a rich result in gold. He located the streets of the town whence the gold rock was taken and had assays made with a result of $4,000 of gold to the ton, the lowest grade of rock assayed being $43. Gov. Wallace has just returned from the place. He paired off the lead, making 84 pairs (?) in width. Its length is not known, but 9,004 feet along the vein has been located. Subsequent assays in Santa Fe give from $3,000 to $6,000 per ton. The whole of the village is built on a ledge, and rock worth $3 per pound has been thrown about as if worthless.

-POLITICAL NOTES :-How industriously the republicans let lone the Hancock-Sherman letter that they demanded so fiercely! Ex-United States Senator Thomas M. Norwood, at the request of a number of delegates to the late Gubernatorial Convention, and of a large number of citizens throughout Georgia, has consented to make a race for Governor against Gov. Colquitt.

President Haves forgets, in his zeal for the education of the Southerners under Federal auspices, that it is such of them as have enjoyed the advantages of schooling that vote the Democratic ticket. Ed ucating everybody there will make the people of the South still more unanimous politically than they now are. Nevada has two seats and votes in the United States Senate. New York city has about one-half interest in one Senator. If the population of New York city were divided up and scattered over the West to make States, each containing as many people as Nevada, they would be entitled to fifty United States Senators. In other words, the city has twenty-five times as many people as the State of Nevada.

A very sharp Republican resides in Cleveland, Ohio. He was talking Garfield quite strongly to a knot of Hancock men the other day, and wound up by offering to bet $100 that he could name the next President of the United States. The bet was promptly covered by one of the Democrats, whereupon the Cleveland man named "Winfield Scott Hancock." The Democrat protested against this. "Why," said he, "you've been blowing Garfield for an hour. That ain't square." "Oh, said the Cleveland man, "when I talk, I talk Garfield. When I bet, I bet on Han-GLEANINGS FROM STATE EXCHANGES.

Senator Dorsey, Secretary of the Radical National Committee, said in Washington, on Friday, that no attempt would be made on the part of the Republicans to carry any of the Southern States, but he June, 1879, $661.06, and for July 1880, was evidently intending to divert suspicion from the Radical programme, which is to send plenty of money to North Carolina and Florida and endeavor to capture the electoral votes of those States. There is good ground for saying that the Republican managers have about come to the conclusion not to send Northern speakers into the South, but to accomplish their purposes by the aid of agents and plenty of money. Davie county names the Senator this their part means a "still-hunt" campaign, year for Rowan and Davie, and it was although every effort will be made to cover The Future Electoral Vote.

]Philadelphia Times.] The full table of the census of all the States [see THE NEWS, 14th inst.] may not be entirely accurate, but the most trustworthy information that could be obtained warrants the belief that the official report will not greatly vary it. Two or three Congressmen may be transferred from one State to another by the variation of fractions of surplus; but we do not look for any official result that will materially hange the relative power of any of the several divisions of States in our future

Electoral Colleges. In order that readers may easily and intelligently analyze the effect of the present census on the political power of the several sections of the country, we give a careful classification of the States, with a recapitulation that exhibits the loss and gain of each .

Georgia, Kentucky,

It will be seen by the foregoing that New England loses three votes in the Electoral College, and it is reasonably certain that another would be lost in Rhode Island if the amendment to the Constitution, forbidding the disfranchisement of citizens on account of race or color, was enforced as it is interpreted and would be enforced in the South. The great Central States lose five electoral votes; the Western States gain eight; the Pacific States gain one, and the old Slave States gain six. This estimate is predicated on the assumption that the number of Congressmen wi be increased to three hundred; but the result would be substantially the same, no matter how large or how small the House may be made, as population would govern in any case. The march of empire in our country is a most interesting and instructive study, and its lessons are indisputable. However statesmen may theorize, the tide of population, the growth of thrift and the preponderance of political power, will gravi-tate as productive soil, inviting climate and natural centres of trade direct them. Texas, within the memory of many readers of the present time as the Botany Bay of the continent, now equals Virginia and Michigan and is closely abreast with Massachusetts, Ken-tucky and Indiana as a mighty Commonwealth, and certain to surpass all of them long before the close of another decade. The Pacific States have made little progress, and give no promise of rapid growth in the future. They now have a power in the Electoral College that is greatly in excess of their population, when compared with the older States. The West and the Southwest exhibit the highest degree of advancement. Kansas, Minnesota, Nebraska and Texas give the belt of our territory where agricultural emigration looks with the greatest favor, and as that class is the great producer of wealth and the most stable in its settlements, it is not difficult to forecast the overwhelming power Western and Southwestern States must soon exercise in the control of the policy of our government. This marvelous growth is in the very heart of the Republic, and its beneficent influence must radiate in every direction and give healthful prosperity to all it reaches.

The most startling and impressive lesson of the census is given in the marvelous growth of the South, and it will do more to pacificate the sectional strife of the country than all the eloquence or patriotism of statesmanship. It will open the eyes of the North to the fact that, while demagogues and partisan organs have been persistently misrepresenting the South as utterly idle and lawless, the people of the South have been quietly attending to their own affairs, struggling against the terrible desolation of war, fostering capital and emigration as best they could, regardless of disturbers at home and abroad. It awakens Pennsylvania and New York and Massachusetts and Maryland to the fact that Southern industry, commerce and political power are not the myths that partisan disclaimers have studiously represented them to be; and the commercial, industrial and financial interests of Philadelphia, New York, Baltimore and Boston will discard the senseless falsifiers who make politics a trade, and view sectional issues from the proper standpoint of general tranquility and prosperity. It is true that the apparent growth of the South presented by the present census is not a correct exhibit of its progress during the last decade; but it does present the South as it is to-day. The census of 1870 was taken in the South by illiterate, idle, corrupt partisan dependents, who had no in-terest in or sympathy with the legitimate progress of these States; but it is admit-ted that Secretary Schurz and Superinten-dent Walker have had the present census taken with the most scrupulous care, and that the most competent and faithful officers have been charged with it in all sections. Its picture of the South, presented by indisputable figures telling of advancement in population, wealth and power, will plead more eloquently for peace and for the harmony of material interests North and South, than could all the orators of the land. It will make the business man of the North; the merchant, the manufacturer, the banker, and all who profit by successful industry, look to the South as a fountain of wealth rather than as a political pandemonium; and when business commands, the mousing partisan must obey.

Political prejudices may leave men in doubt when political necessity compels orators and organs to misrepresent the truth; but when the cold figures of a trusted census report enter the arena with the perversions demagogues, the contest is an unequal one, and interest and patriotism make common cause to harmonize a common country.

NEW YORK CHARACTERS.

The Fortune Tellers.

There isn't a city in the world more densely infested with the social parasites called "card fortune tellers" than New York. Their styles, their names, residences, and characteristics generally, have changed since Doesticks wrote his "Witches," but they exist in sufficient quantities to fleece the rural and unwary generally, to trade upon the weak spots in human nature, which they have studied as closely as Balzac, and to make for themselves a very decent living. Take up a morning paper, the Herald especially: Under the heads of "Astrology" and "Fortune Tell-ing," you will find scores of advertisements in which the advertisers profess to cast your horoscope, to show you your fu-ture wife or husband, and all for the remarkably small sum of fifty cents-ladies a quarter. I could never understand the economical distinction made in favor of the ladies. It is probably based upon the fact that they BELIEVE A GREAT DEAL MORE readily than the others, and that they are more frequent customers. I am sure if I didn't like the first twenty-five cent fortune told me, I would go again, and to another shop. By perseverance, and a liberal outpay of quarters, it is possible to strike a "hummer."

It seems strange that these men and women should flourish in an age so enlightened as this, and in a city which possesses the focussed civilization of the day; but it is true. I know personally two men who do nothing else for a living, and they have confided in me that customers are never scarce. But what is the use of speculating on such idiosyncrasies of fifty and twenty-five cent shrimps when a gilded whale like Commodore Vanderbilt frequently ran his business on the predictions of soothsayers, and was altogether as superstitious as a sailor? There are two kinds of the lower class of fortune-tellers -those who still stick to the Egyptian mummery, and come the red curtain and black velvet gown over you, and the other, more modern, whose office is very little different from that of a real estate firm, and who go about the business in a cold-blooded manner. Both styles take. The hysterical women and servant girls generally prefer the people with the strange names and outlandish garb. It seems more like the genuine astrological affair, and is certainly more for the money.

MR. CHARLES FOSTER is at the head of all fortune tellers in this city. He charges $5 and his states are as remarkable and startling, done as they are without any pretence of side show business, as the divelgings of the Blecker streetand Third Avenue. Avenue astrologers are puerile and transparent. I do not pretend to speak of him critically, and have introduced him merely to show his style of business. He has always more work than he can attend to. and is especially sought after by ladies. As many carriages have halted at his door as ever lined the curb at Grace Church, and in many instances the equipages are the same. He gave me a sitting once and I shall never forget what he said to me: "You must remember everything I say to you, young man, because I shall be in a trance, and will retain nothing of what passes from the spirit world through me." Then he took off his coat, lit a cigar and begun. What he told me doesn't matter now. It was nothing to smile at, I can assure you. He was interrupted several times by callers, but excused himself and we descended into Hades again. All this in a trance, remember. I think he was still in a trance when he produced a decanter and gave me as good a glass of slierry as I ever tasted. Another source of revenue for those who are smart enough to coin money out of the supernatural is

THE SPIRITUALISTIC SEANCE. The one in Grand street, run by a Mrs. Wilson, is the biggest fraud of them all. You pay 25 cents to sit on a hard chair, and you are expected to believe that Mrs. Wilson, who disappeared in the cabinet, is still tied to her chair, and that the very hideous-looking gentleman with the black beard who tells us through the opening in the door how he was drowned in Lake Michigan forty years ago, is really "Uncle Billy," and not Mrs. Wilson with a mask and whiskers. If there is any movement on the part of one of the doubters to get at Uncle Billy he is immediately squelched, and if the spirit of criticism is too active, why the husband of the "mejum" or some one else declares that the spirits cannot work save where there is perfect harmony. It is THE COSMOPOLITAN CHARACTER of New York city which makes all this aberration (if I can so define it) possible. We have every religion under the sun practiced in Gotham. The Koran and Veda books are read here as regularly as in the Orient, and I have seen with my civilized and Christian optics the temple of Joss in the Chinese quarter at a time when a Chinese Chatham street cigar peddler was at his prayers. I am not particularly acquainted with all its ramifications, but the Chinese religion contains the act of prayer reduced to a beautiful system. The prayers are

PAINTED ON FIRE-CRACKER PAPER and are sold by a man who makes prayers a specialty. When you feel a little wicked or are conscious of any sensation which calls for prayer as an antidote, you go to the Joss Church in Baxter street and burn one or two of these slips. Certainly nothing could be more simple.

I could explain all the card swindles, spirit photographs, and all the rest of the nonsense if it was at all necessary. But it isn't. The peculiar class making up the patrons of astrologers are beyond the reach of reason. They have Napoleon's dream book in their bureau drawers, and they are as much sunk in superstition of the absurd sort as the Voudoo negroes of New

Do Not Follow His Example.

The example of Dr. Tanner's fast is not likely to prove an exception. As after a circus has passed through a country town, a majority of the boys may always be observed attempting feats of ground and lofty tumbling, so we expect to hear of hundreds of ambitious youths trying to imitate Dr. Tanner's wonderful abstinence from food.

If people who are about undertaking such a fast will reflect for a moment on its folly, they will desist. No good can come from it, and if persevered in, it would ordinarily result in illness and death.

Eat while you can get enough to eat, and fast only in time of famine—from which, good Lord deliver us!

Innocent Games.

[New York Times.] The motives of the man who devised a modification of the pattern of playing-cards by substituting Colonels and Goddesses of Liberty for Kings and Queens, and supplying the place of spades, diamonds, clubs and hearts with stars and other novel figures, may have been pure, but his conduct was not wholly above suspicion. He may not have intended to assist mendacious boys to play cards and yet with a seeming truth to allege that they were playing some entirely new and thoroughly evangelical game, but in at least one conspicuous case such has been the result of his invention, and it is difficult to acquit him of a large share of the blame.

The Rev. Mr. Thompson is a much respected elergyman of Clinton, Ill. For many years he has been a local leader of the extreme Episcopal Low Church Party, and, in private life, without the surplice and prayer-book, and other devotional implements, he could with difficulty be distinguished from a Presbyterian. Mr. Thompson was particularly earnest in his opposition to card-playing. He held that it was scarcely distinguishable from gambling, and that it was nearly as objectionable as ritualism. He never failed to preach a yearly sermon on the wickedness of card-playing, and his incidental allu-sions to whist players who value four aces or three of a kind more than virtue and sobriety, and to poker-players who "make it the next" in the hope of scoring "four by honors," were believed by the ladies of the congregation to show a masterly knowledge of the intricacies of those wicked games He always said that there were many innocent and amusing games, such as checkers, croquet, and "Dr. Busby," which devout people could play without immorality, and that it was, therefore, an unnecessary piece of wickedness to play immoral games with the corrupt and debasing cards used by professional gamblers. Mr. Thompson has a son of about 14 years of age who is not altogether as good and innocent as his father. In fact, he is regarded by the public as the kind of boy in whose neighborhood it is unwise to attempt to cultivate an orchard or to raise watermelons. His father, however, has the utmost confidence in him, and has never dreamed that his son's views of property in fruit are in conflict with those of his neighbors.

One evening last winter, Master Charles brought home with him a pack of the socalled "national cards," and exhibited them to his father. "Thishyer," he remarked, "is a first-rate game, not a bit like cards. I wouldn't play cards no soon-eride steal apples; but this hyer game was give to me by the Presbyterian Sundayschool Superintendent, and he wants you to see how you like it." Good Mr. Thompson laid aside his newspaper, and examining the cards with much interest, asked how they were to be used. This wicked son thereupon explained to him the principles of a game which he called the "national game," but which was simply the notoriously wicked game of euchre. Mr. Thompson was greatly pleased with it, and in the course of the evening attained so much proficiency that he more than once "went it alone" and beat Master Charles

Not satisfied with this achievement Master Charles proceeded to teach his trusting father the game of whist, inducing both his mother and his sister to innocently join in the carnival of crime. To whist he gave the flimsy name of the "family's delight," and under that name the Thompson household played hundreds of games of whist—Mr. Thompson himself developing a real genius for the game, and at times rebuking his partner for refusing to return his lead or taking his own trick with a severity that a veteran English whist-matron might have envied. Only once was any suspicion of the character of the game aroused. Miss Thompson, who occasionally read novels, once remarked, "Charlie, isn't family delight something like whist? I was reading the other day about some people who were playing whist, and they had trumps and tricks and long suits, just as we do." Master Charles, however, did not lose his presence of mind, but replied, "Wot of it? Ain't trumps spoken of in the Bible? You ain't a going to believe that Peter and Balaam, and the rest of 'em, played cards, are you?" This argument allayed suspicion, and the games went on without further scruples on the part of the bad boy's sister.

Though Mr. Thompson liked whist, and had no objections to "high-low-jack" when disguised as "up-down-and-across," his affections were chiefly centered upon euchre. With the exception of Saturday and Sunday nights, he played euchre with Master Charles every evening, and often said to him, "My son, I hope you see how much more real pleasure an innocent and improving game affords than any that can be derived from card-playing." Master Charles greatly enjoyed his deception of his venerable father, and had but one regret in connection with it. This was his inability to introduce poker in any respectable guise. As that game is inseparably connected with betting, its true character could not be concealed, and Master Charles was compelled to deny himself the pleasure of seeing his deceived parent betting on a "full hand" and finding that it was not good in comparison with his son's "straight flush." Nevertheless, Charles had done what he could, and he felt that few sons had ever "sold" their fathers as ably and completely as he had done.

It was only a short time ago that two of Mr. Thompson's vestrymen-both Low Churchmen of the lowest type—called on their Rector and found him so earnestly occupied in a game of euchre that he requested them to sit down for a moment until he should have finished the game Those two good men, both of whom had amassed much sinful learning in their youth, were struck with horror at the nature of the clergyman's occupation. They heard him with their own ears remark, "I make it next and play it alone," and saw him play both bowers, the ace, and the king, and end the game with a "mark." Master Charles then hastily gathered up the cards, and, pleading an errand down town, fled overwhelmed with terror at his inevitable detection. We can faintly imagine the surprise and remorse of the good Mr. Thompson when he learned that for months he had been in the constant habit of playing at home the games that he denounced in the pulpit. Nothing could convince the vestrymen that their clergyman was innocent. They lost no time in calling a meeting of the church, and after a recital of Mr. Thompson's wickedness and hypocrisy, they obtained an almost unanimously signed request for the Rector's resignation. Mr. Thompson is now without a charge, and the zealous vestrymen are currently believed to be about to carry the church over to the Reformed Episcopa-lians. As for the depraved Master Charles, he has disappeared, and great hopes are entertained by the apple and watermelon growers of Clinton that he has gone to fight the Indians, who can hardly fail to appreciate his luxuriant, curly hair.
